Re: Comments on Report Review: UC Center Sacramento

The CNAS Executive Committee discussed the Report on the UC Center in Sacramento. The committee noted that this is a valuable program, yet it is not clear what is at stake for UCR in this decision. The benefits of having the UCCS overseen by Davis are clear, but the cons not elaborated. The committee questioned the decision that the director would be automatically an existing member of UCD faculty as opposed to a national search. The committee also noted that it would be helpful to show how data on enrollment varies across all of the UC campuses to demonstrate fairness, and that this program is being equally advertised across all campuses.
